The Society Hill Civic Association (SHCA) has learned that the Alterra Property Group LLC is in the preliminary stages of a proposal to construct a mixed-use development on the site at 309 S. 5th Street, which presently houses a Super Fresh market. These plans came to light in May when representatives met with the Association’s Zoning and Historic Preservation Committee (ZHP) with conceptual designs for the site, having first presented these plans to the Philadelphia City Planning Commission. Alterra informed ZHP that it is under contract with the owner to purchase the site and that an August closing of the agreement was anticipated. It stated that the Super Fresh market would no longer be a tenant under its development scheme.

ZHP was presented with three preliminary design schemes (“A” “B” & “C”), each a different version of a building with ground floor commercial space and rental apartments above. Each plan appeared to cover most of the Super Fresh site — including some or all of the current parking area. Proposals “A” and “B” were “by right” designs, no taller than the 38 feet the site is zoned for. Recall that the city just updated the entire zoning code in 2012 as a result of a multi-year process and that 38 feet was deemed to be the maximum height for this commercial stretch of Society Hill. The developer proposed stucco exteriors for the “A” and “B” designs, which he admitted is not in keeping with the community’s historic look.

Leo Addimando, co-founder of Alterra, points to his Shirt Corner project at 3rd and Market Streets in Old City as an example of the type of mixed-use project he envisions. Alterra also stated that the property is listed as “non-contributing” to our historic district and that, therefore, the Historical Commission would have only “advisory” authority. Days later the Commission was contacted and explained that the developer is incorrect, and that the Commission has full authority to approve or reject the design of any new construction. The Historic Commission retains “plenary” control over the site because at the time of nomination of the district to the Philadelphia Register of Historic Places a building existed on the property.

Alternatively, Alterra showed its preferred scheme “C”, a 59-foot-high building with ground floor commercial and four stories of rental apartments — mostly small, one-bedroom units. This design would require a zoning variance from the Zoning Board of Adjustment and our community. Nearby neighbors would also have significant input. Alterra said that if Society Hill went along with the 59-foot version, it could construct the façade in a more expensive material, such as brick.

Word quickly spread throughout the community that we were going to potentially lose the supermarket and that a five-story building was being proposed to replace it. Concerned neighbors from the 500 block of Delancey put out flyers calling for a community meeting to discuss what should be done. Nearly one hundred

It’s been a busy spring. First, I’d like to thank SHCA Directors and Officers — whose terms of office concluded on May 30 — for their service to the community last year and welcome the new Directors and Officers, who volunteered to serve starting June 1. I also want to acknowledge the continuing service of the individual block coordinators, who form the backbone of the civic association, and the members of the various committees that implement and oversee multiple neighborhood projects and activities.

Since the distribution of the last Reporter, neighborhood tree tenders planted trees, a successful clean-up day took place in May, a very pleasant recognition of the block coordinators was held at the Physick House and a quite successful annual Open House & Garden Tour took place on May 17. And lastly, the fourth Washington Square Affair fundraiser took place on June 9, the most successful one to date. Everyone involved in each of these activities and projects deserves the neighborhood’s heartfelt thanks.

I am happy to report that the Interstate Land Management Corporation (ILMC) Board approved SHCA’s terms for the leasing of the parking lot on Front Street. It is hoped that the Civic Association will be able to take over the Front Street lot before September 1, 2015. There will be 40 leases available for $190 per month. Those leasing a spot will need to make a six-month commitment, which can be renewed every six months. After the 40 spaces are leased, when a space becomes available it will be awarded in the order the request was received. Twenty-seven parking spots in the Front Street parking lot will remain available for metered public parking. The leases will provide off-street parking to 40 neighborhood residents and also supply revenue to SHCA for neighborhood projects. If you are considering leasing a parking spot at the site or previously expressed interest in leasing a parking spot on Front Street, please contact or reconfirm your interests with Matt DeJulio. The SHCA/ILMC preliminary agreement is currently awaiting approval by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation, which is expected to approve it and present SHCA with a lease proposal in the next few weeks. Once a lease is agreed to with ILMC, we will enter into a management agreement with a parking lot company. Currently, the Association is talking to both Parkway and Park America as potential management companies.

Neighborhood residents should also be aware that Verizon is planning to roll out its FIOS network in the next few months. Right now, Verizon’s copper phone lines run under the streets, while Comcast cable lines run under the brick sidewalks. Verizon representatives presented their plans at a public meeting held on June 17 and have asked SHCA to provide the names and contact information for the block coordinators in order to determine, block by block, how the service lines will be installed. An unresolved issue concerns whether Comcast should be required to make its public right-of-way easements available to Verizon or insist that Verizon install a parallel right-of-way for its cables.

We have been in contact with the Philadelphia Streets Department to seek its assistance with requiring Comcast and Verizon to work together and reach a joint-use agreement. Such an agreement would eliminate the possibility of a proliferation of house and sidewalk service boxes.

A major change which could affect all neighborhood residents is detailed in the front-page story of this edition. The owners of the retail space on 5th Street between Spruce and Delancey recently entered into an agreement with a developer. Plans for the properties are in the preliminary stages. Many members of the Association and neighbors have already contributed their time to make sure that whatever is proposed includes the best design and materials for the site and at the same time recognizes and respects the historic nature of this neighborhood. As events develop, SHCA will send out emails to keep the Society Hill community apprised of the proposals.
people crowded into the Starr Garden community room on May 27 to exchange ideas. Several SHCA Board Members and ZHP Chair Lorna Katz-Lawson attended. Residents expressed their concerns. Lorna and SHCA Vice President Kim Williams assured the attendees that SHCA was taking action to address their concerns and formulate a game plan for our community’s input into the site’s development. Since this grassroots meeting, an ad-hoc committee of SHCA’s board, comprised of lawyers and board members, met and agreed to propose the following to the Board: (1) a meeting with the site owner to discuss the development (2) hiring an outside attorney specializing in zoning law (3) finding a design team to lead a community discussion on the goals for the site (4) meeting with our district councilman, Mark Squilla. A blast email announcing this plan was sent to association members.

An additional concern of SHCA and residents is that Mr. Addimando spoke of acquiring the commercial strip across from the Super Fresh, although he said there are presently no plans for its redevelopment.

SHCA is planning the format of the community discussion at this writing. However, in advance of that, SHCA Board Members have heard residents express a number of concerns regarding the Super Fresh site development: (1) loss of a food store (2) scale of the development (3) lack of open space (4) mediocre design and materials (5) small rental apartments.

At its June board meeting, SHCA formally authorized the Committee by resolution and agreed to retain an attorney specializing in zoning and land use, real estate, real estate litigation and government relations.

SHCA members will receive information in the regular weekly blast emails on Fridays. Flyers will be distributed for community meetings organized by SHCA, including any formal proposal by the developer. Stay tuned.
Welcome and Farewell

One of the Best Shopping Cities in America

Yes, Forbes magazine rates Philadelphia as number six in its list of the top 25 shopping cities in the U.S., with Houston and Dallas as number one and number two. Over 20,000 retail locations, 29 shopping centers, a modest eight percent sales tax and reasonable retail prices make Philadelphia a very attractive place to shop.

One of the great places to shop locally is the Pine Street corridor, which used to be antique row, but now hosts a variety of shops. Enjoy and support these businesses that are our neighbors.

Are there too many damaged and dangerous sidewalks in our neighborhood? This can easily be changed for the better. Since late 2009, Society Hill Civic Association’s “Fix the Brix” program has offered a subsidy to all homeowners who need to level their uneven sidewalks. We will reimburse 40 percent, up to $300, of the amount to any owner who has their sidewalk leveled by a mason. We can provide you with a list of recommended masons.

See photos showing how sidewalks have and can be improved. We thank the property owners who made a contribution to our neighborhood by making our sidewalks better for pedestrians. This is a walking city and safer sidewalks benefit all of us!

How to get started:
• Email us a photo of the area of work to be done.
• Get several estimates from masons and/or arborists. We have a suggested list.
• Choose a mason and have work done to your satisfaction.
• Make copies of the invoice of finished work and mail one to SHCA, P.O. Box 63503, Philadelphia PA 19147. Email us a photo of finished work.
• Receive a check within a few weeks!

For more information or a list of masons and arborists, contact Martha Levine at 215-629-0727 or marthalev6@gmail.com.

See the Lights
Our neighborhood has two light sources that can keep our sidewalks well lit after dark: 500 Franklin Lights and our individual house front door lights. We need both for security and visibility while walking at night. See a Franklin Light that is out or blinking? Call 311 for service. After dark, flip the switch on your front door light, or use a timer or photo sensor to turn on the light automatically. Keep it on all night.

Report Graffiti
You can help control unsightly graffiti. Do you see this blight on any public surface – poles, mailboxes, or walls? SHCA has hired Graffiti Removal Experts to help. To report a location, email todd@graffiti removalexperts.com. For private property graffiti removal, call 311 or 215-686-8686.

Yankee Gutter Repair and Maintenance

Yankee, built-in or integral gutters are drainage systems built into the cornice of a roof so that they cannot be seen along the roofline. Commonly found on homes dating from the 1700s through the early 1900s, these structural features were particularly popular in the construction of Victorian homes.

Yankee gutters consist of a U- or V-shaped wooden trough lined with metal, traditionally copper or terne-coated steel, which directs water away from the house. Since they are not easily visible, unseen problems may occur.

How to Spot Damage

The metal liner protects the wooden trough. Over time, however, wear can create gaps, cracks or corrosion in the metal. When the metal liner leaks, moisture builds up, causing decay in the lookout where it enters the exterior wall.

Here are some common signs of damage to check for when examining your drainage system:

- Chipped or peeling paint under the eaves
- Moist or rotting wood
- Damage to masonry
- Water leaking into your home

Left unchecked or unrepaired, these symptoms often lead to structural damage to framing, walls, ceiling or decorative moldings, making restoration to match the original appearance of your home an expensive endeavor.

How to Avoid or Repair Damage

Preventative steps to avoid damage are always best. Built-in gutters like Yankees are less likely to be clogged, but require regular inspection. Simple steps, like routine wood sealing and maintaining the solder joints in the metal, can help prevent damage, stave off more expensive repairs and preserve the beauty of your historical home.

Some homeowners choose to roof over their internal gutter system and use a more modern external one. This option may save money, but it changes the original appearance of the structure and fails to address damage caused by the internal drainage system. Covering up structural damage with vinyl or aluminum won’t magically solve the problem. In fact, this repair method usually causes more damage that may result in losing the entire front porch.

Sometimes, despite our best efforts, damage to the metal solder joints is unavoidable. Traditionally, we recommend relining the metal trough. If you want to tackle this project yourself, here are five basic steps to take when repairing your Yankee gutters using a liquid rubber membrane:

Safety First: Since gutters are often located on the second story or higher of older homes, take precautions. Use extension ladders, scaffolding, harnesses or whatever safety measures are required for your individual repair needs.

Prep: Prepping the gutters should begin with a thorough cleaning. You can remove dirt easily with a paintbrush. Be sure to carefully scrape off any loose bits of old coating. Finally, rinse the gutters with water and a little detergent to make sure the surface of the metal is clean and oil free. Allow the surface to dry completely.

Bonus Tip: If you find mold in your gutters, soak in a 1:3 bleach to water solution for up to 15 minutes, then scrub it loose using a stiff brush and soapy water.

Patch: First, clean the damaged area by wiping it with paint thinner. Using butyl tape, a self-adhesive tape that adheres well to metal, patch any damaged areas. Cut the tape to size and extend the tape about 1 inch over both sides of the damage. Be sure to keep the release tape intact while you patch with the butyl tape. Working from the center of the patch out, firmly press the sticky side of the butyl tape to the damaged area. Remove the release paper.

Activate: Before you can apply the liquid rubber membrane, you’ll need to activate it by adding a catalyst to the rubber solution. Follow the manufacturer’s directions carefully.

Apply: Use a paintbrush, a short-nap roller or a squeegee to apply the activated rubber membrane along the length of the gutter. Be sure to cover it with a thick coat. Check your local forecast to make sure the weather will be clear for 16 to 20 hours after application. Heavy rains will pit the surface before the membrane has a chance to set. The membrane takes up to 10 days to cure completely.

Following these easy steps will extend the life of your Yankee gutters and preserve the original structural and decorative features of your historic home.

Until recently, I only vaguely knew about the Acadians or “Cajuns” who came from the Nova Scotia region of Canada and ended up in Louisiana.

Since then, I’ve learned that about 11,500 Acadians were brutally displaced by the British in 1755. Some 453 of these unfortunates ended up living in Philadelphia on the north side of Pine Street between 5th and 6th, some for many years.

Bad timing: When the Acadians arrived here on three sloops on November 18, 1755, they were not welcomed with open arms. Why? They were French-speaking in a British colony. They were “Papists,” so government officials feared they would collude with Irish Catholics to betray Pennsylvania to the French. It was a time when Philadelphians greatly feared French and Indian attacks from the west.

At first the Acadians were confined under guard to their ships.

Fearing that such close quarters would quicken the spread of disease, which eventually did kill about half of them, Governor Robert Morris ordered the Acadians moved to Province Island — near where the airport is today.

Aided by Anthony Benezet, a Philadelphia Quaker who was born in France, the Acadians received desperately needed clothing and food from him and other members of the Society of Friends. Benezet also helped the deportees get lodging in one-story wooden houses on Pine Street.

Despite the British province’s best efforts to indenture the children as apprentices or send the families out to the surrounding areas, the deportees remained in Philadelphia.

These proud Acadians, who considered themselves prisoners of war, steadfastly refused to work for any support they received from Pennsylvania.

In all, Pennsylvania paid out some 10,000 pounds over 20 years to support the Acadians. But their living conditions were often miserable.

Evangeline Resurrects a Culture

The Acadians’ expulsion was largely forgotten history — until Henry Wadsworth Longfellow published Evangeline in 1847.

This remarkably popular, 1,400-plus-line epic poem catapulted the Acadians into the public eye some 92 years after their expulsion from Canada.

For the full poem, go to: www.brynmawr.edu/emeritus/gather/Dudden/poem.html

Three Things you may not know about the Acadians

Many of the Philadelphia Acadians who died are buried in Washington Square.

A Canadian Royal Proclamation in 2003 acknowledged the expulsion of the Acadians, but did not apologize for it.

Even though Evangeline is a fictional character, a statue of her stands in the courtyard of a French church in Grand-Pré, Nova Scotia. Another one was donated to the town of St. Martinville, Louisiana, by the cast and crew of the film, Evangeline.

Where in the world is Evangeline?

Believe it or not, people still are searching for her and Gabriel.

Longfellow himself said, “In my rambles through Philadelphia, I passed the almshouse of the Friends [then at 312 Walnut Street], and was deeply impressed by its quiet and seclusion.”

“When I wrote the poem the image of this place came back to me, and I selected it for the closing scene. The story was not connected with it by any tradition.”

But people believe what they want. Many think the churchyard that inspired Longfellow is at Holy Trinity Church, 615 Spruce Street.

Who knows? After all, it’s only one block from where many of the Acadians lived.

Enjoy Healthy, Tasty Wines this Summer

We welcome Julie Featherman, who will be writing a new column focused on tips, strategies and ideas for enjoying a more healthful, holistic and eco-friendly life.

For many of us, the perfect summer evening includes a sunset, companions and a relaxing glass of wine. Here are my tips for a more healthy and tasty summer wine experience.

1 Buy Organic. The grapes used in organic and biodynamic wines are not grown with the harmful chemicals found in conventional vineyard fertilizers, fungicides and pesticides. Recent class actions filed in response to arsenic tainted wines are making today’s headlines. These toxic compounds find their way into wine through pesticide residue and other methods. Avoid this litigious mess and get environmentally friendly by supporting organic farming practices.

There are many health benefits to drinking wine in moderation, including protecting our hearts, improving blood pressure and supporting our immune system. Why not boost these positive properties by steering clear of undermining chemicals? Look for a reputable certification like USDA Organic, ECOCERT, BIOFRANC, Nature et Progres, or Terre et Vie to make sure you’re buying the real deal.

2 Avoid Sulphites. SO₂ has been added to wine for centuries to preserve and maintain its freshness. A small percentage of people are allergic to sulphites. Wines labeled “100% Organic” contain the lowest amount of naturally occurring sulphites. Keep in mind that organic wines have a short shelf life because they lack added preservatives. Drink up before the summer ends!

3 Head for the Hills. Many people believe that grapes grown in higher altitudes taste better. Lower temperatures at night and higher UV radiation, light exposure and temperatures by day seem to contribute to a noticeably better and well-rounded taste. Try a wine from a vineyard in Mt. Etna, Sicily or Argentina and see if you can taste the difference.

4 Aerate. Tannins can diminish the taste of wine’s more delicate flavors. Aeration exposes the wine to oxygen and naturally corrects its astringency. Letting the wine breathe in its glass for up to an hour after pouring, swirling the wine in a large-mouthed wineglass, and using decanters and aerating devices all do the trick. Feeling adventurous? Break out the blender! Blend wine for 20-30 seconds on high speed. Let it settle, and voila, that Two Buck Chuck will fool the crowds.

Here are my recommendations for your summer imbibing. Best online retailers for organic wines include The Organic Cellar and The Organic Wine Company. Cheers!

Reds: Badger Mountain NSA Cabernet Sauvignon, La Marouette Pinot Noir 2013 and high-altitude Pircas Negras Malbec 2013 from Argentina.

Whites: Sicilian Rilento’s Chardonnay, Grillo and Pinot Grigio IGT.

Sparkling: Perlage Altana Rosato Frizzante 2013 and Italian Giol Rosato Frizzante IGT, both Italian.

A special thank you to the generous homeowners who allowed us to showcase their wonderful homes and gardens for the tour. Without them we could not have this annual SHCA fundraiser.

Special thanks to the Society Hill Open House & Garden Tour volunteers. There were couples, families, brothers and sisters, and mothers and daughters. Some have been volunteering for as long as 26 years. And thanks to photographer Robert Siddall of Parallel Design for the pictures.

Welcome to the lazy, hazy days of summer. Our friends at the Food Trust, who run the Headhouse Farmers’ Market, undoubtedly dispute the “lazy” part of the old adage, as do the farmers and purveyors who supply the stalls. They are all hard at work making sure the selections are top-notch, tempting and beautifully presented.

This year’s market offers a great mix of tried and true favorites with plenty of new merchandise, adding up to prime summer feasting. Katy Wich, Manager of the Farmers’ Market Program for the Food Trust, comments, “Summer is picnic season, and there’s no better place to provision for a really special meal al fresco than the Headhouse Farmers’ Market. There are so many unique and delicious foods on offer, truly something for every taste.”

Assistant Manager Lisa Kelly helped assemble this guide to a perfect picnic:

Start at Green Aisle Grocery and pick up a jar of pistachio butter — great on crackers with sharp cheese. Drizzle it with some Green Aisle Lavender Honey or Salty Strawberry Preserves for a sublimely grownup twist on PB&J.

Then head to Talula’s Table for the local honey fig dip, local mushroom spread and curried lamb sausage for a delightfully eclectic appetizer plate.

Next, visit Market Day Canelé for their justifiably famous egg salad made with local salad greens and bacon on fresh baked rolls, a low-stress and delicious grab-and-go option.

Still tempted? Shellbark Hollow Farm won “Best of Philly” for their Chevre 2 spread. They offer several different chevre spreads and they change the flavors often, so there’s plenty of variety each and every week. Don’t miss their Tomato Nest Biscuits — fresh goat cheese set in a biscuit mold, nestled among chopped tomato and fresh herbs.

Don’t stop yet. La Divisa Meats is new to the Headhouse Market, and their charcuterie has already gained a loyal following. Try the silken liver pâté or the peppery cotto salami on slices of baguette from Wild Flour Bakery.

Not yet sated? Food and Ferments, another new merchant, serves up a wide array of fermented food, which seems to be the latest culinary trend. The grape kombucha and beet kvass are great alternatives to more prosaic beverages and, even better, are purported to have significant health benefits. Hearts of Fire, the stand’s version of kimchi (Korean spiced and fermented cabbage), is delicious on its own, but try it as a zesty sandwich condiment. Or use it as a delightful way to add some heat to grilled meat or fish. Added bonus: fermented foods contain natural preservatives, so you don’t have to worry about them spoiling in the heat.

Whether you picnic in a remote meadow, a sunny beach or your Society Hill backyard, the Headhouse Farmers’ Market has you covered.

The Food Trust is a nonprofit organization whose mission is to ensure that everyone has access to affordable, nutritious food and information to make healthy decisions.

SALE PENDING
Cella Luxuria, the furniture and design retailer that first made an impact at 1214 Chestnut Street, has just opened a second retail store at 331 South Street. For those unfamiliar with the brand ethos of Cella, the company has a three-fold manifesto, “Metropolitan, Modern, Mindful.” Inspired by Philadelphia’s history as a great industrial engine, the store’s founders have designed a space with a warehouse-like feel. At the same time, the store is softened by the textiles, the recycled or reimagined furniture and the accessories on display.

Their website details the philosophy that informs their choice of products:

“We are drawn to materials that are either sustainably-sourced (such as linen, hemp and bamboo) or extremely durable (such as solid wood, top-grain leather, wool and heavy metals). Secondly, we select furniture and accessories that have been expertly crafted from reclaimed wood, steel and iron, as well as industrial-grade textiles. And, thirdly, what hasn’t been ‘reclaimed’ is simply enduring: classic mid-century modern designs that will remain fashion-forward and ever-relevant for generations to come.”

Far and away, my favorite line of products is Cella’s private-label furniture. The company offers a full range of tables, benches, desks and chests of drawers by traditional furniture craftsmen. So far, we can check the “expertly crafted” box. Most unusually, the wood used is reclaimed planks that are sourced from old fishing boats. The patina is remarkable. Planks from a variety of colored vessels have been sanded, leaving a gentle patchwork of pastel-edged pieces of wood. We can check the “sustainably sourced” box, too. The private-label line looks very contemporary, and it’s gratifying to know that the products are unique and hand-made by expert craftsmen.

The store features unusual mid-century treasures. My favorite of these is a collection of posters from Europe — possibly from the 50s and quite probably used as a teaching aid in a classroom. These one-of-a-kind posters work beautifully as quirky pieces of art.

It’s Summer and Crime Goes UP
Don’t be a Victim

The Downspout Devil is at it again. If you hear metallic-sounding noises or you see someone tugging at downspouts, do not hesitate to call 911.

It’s dining al fresco time — please do not leave your purse hanging on the back of your chair and check your credit cards often. Thieves are stealing just one and using it to your financial dismay. Cancel your card immediately and also call 911 to report the theft. Guys, you also need to be careful — keep your wallet in a front pocket, rather than a back pocket where it is more easily stolen.

If you are going away this summer, ask a neighbor to keep an eye out for unusual activity. Provide a key and the code to your alarm system so they will be able to access space inside to store mail and newspapers. And don’t advertise your plans on social media. Remember to put lights on a timer and don’t leave notes for delivery persons. Put valuables in a safe place and not near an uncovered window. Improve your odds so you can relax while on vacation.

Repetitive, I know, but, leave outside lights on overnight and turn on your alarm system every time you leave or go to bed.

Remember, save your old cell phones and gather all those children’s books that are no longer used by your kids or grandkids. The cell phones are re-programmed for the domestically abused or the elderly. The books are given to shelters. Books for any age child are welcome. Bring everything to 414 Spruce Street, and all will be given to the police for distribution.

2015 Membership Drive Approaches All-Time High

By early June, Society Hill Civic Association membership stood at 1,039, surpassing the 2014 year-end total of 1,035. Renewals have been running ahead by about four percent, while 103 members still have not renewed. One hundred new members have made up the difference. Our goal is to exceed our all-time high of 1,068, set in 2013, by year-end 2015.

If you have delayed in sending in your renewal or wish to join, please do so today and help us reach an all-time high. Remember, a number of restaurants and businesses offer discounts to shoppers who show their SHCA membership cards.

We welcome each of the over 3,600 Society Hill households to join SHCA. Your civic association helps protect your real estate investment by funding many improvement projects, as well as providing subsidies to neighbors who plant trees and fix their sidewalks. We help enhance your quality of life when we advocate on your behalf regarding zoning changes, real estate taxes, crime problems and traffic issues, through the hard work of our dedicated board of directors, committee members, block coordinators, and most importantly, your membership dues.

Without member dues, SHCA would cease to function. Protect your neighborhood and your real estate investment. Sign up today!

Email Mattdejulio@aol.com with questions or comments, which will be shared with our board members representing every quadrant in our unique and historic neighborhood.

You don’t even have to be Jewish. “You just have to be calm and eat a cupcake whenever the spirit moves you,” says Roz, who sells the best cake and challah that a small amount of money can buy. Since 1997, Homemade Goodies by Roz, as her shop is called, has been a neighborhood fixture on 5th Street just north of South, 510, to be exact. Her inviting storefront displays her eclectic collection of teapots and cookie jars, dozens of which can also be found on the tables and counters inside.

Besides being an oasis of warmth reflecting the proprietor’s welcoming and generous personality, the shop functions as a neighborhood community center. Customers and friends are invited to put up notices of local events — a concert at The Settlement Music School, a lecture at the Museum of American Jewish History. Roz is naturally civic-minded and enjoys helping those less fortunate than herself. She solicits handmade knitted and crocheted blankets for Project Linus, a nationwide organization that helps children in hospitals or who are victims of natural catastrophes. She even provides the yarn. An animal lover, she collects toys, leashes, dog food and money for Almost Home, a rescue organization with a branch in Pennsauken.

Coincidentally, I adopted my latest canine companion, Trixie, from Almost Home. While I bought a coffee and prune bar early one spring morning, Trixie was given several biscuits; they weren’t baked on the premises, but were apparently delicious. “I used to have a dog but right now I’m a cat person,” Roz told me, showing me a photo of Felix, a handsome black and brown tabby.

On a more recent visit to purchase a warm challah, which comes in several flavors, Roz related the serendipitous story of how she became a professional baker. “I was working as a bank teller when two women who had accounts at Mellon opened a luncheonette in Old City. I offered to make them a Jewish apple cake. It was gone within an hour.” Thus began “the hardest thing I’ve ever done in my life,” says Roz, who has been a pre-school teacher, corporate trainer, retail buyer and activities director at a retirement home. “My mother and my grandmothers were all good cooks and bakers,” says Roz. “I guess they passed along those genes to me.”

A native Philadelphian who was raised in Mt. Airy, Roz graduated from Edmonds Elementary, Leeds Junior High and Germantown High. “They’re all gone now,” she laments. Today, Roz and her husband, Morris, live in Northeast Philly. Coincidentally, he used to drive the Number 50 SEPTA trolley down 5th Street. “He’s retired now, so he helps me make deliveries to my suburban clients.”

Her parents didn’t keep a kosher home, nor does Roz, who has two grown children and two grandchildren. “It was at the request of a nearby Orthodox shul — B’nai Abraham — that I decided to have a non-dairy kosher shop, which boosted my business. I do a lot of catering for religious institutions, but I also serve the general population. I make cupcakes for Valentine’s Day, St. Patrick’s Day, July 4th, Christmas and Chanukah.” Roz not only drives to work every day except Saturday and Monday, when the shop is closed, but delivers challah and other baked goods on Fridays to hospitals and customers as far away as the Main Line and Elkins Park.

This November, when she turns 67, Roz will have served the community for 18 years. If you buy a home in Society Hill, you’ll receive a Welcome Basket that includes Roz’ banana bread and brownies. “Martha Levine asked me a long time ago if I’d participate in SHCA’s program to welcome new neighbors, and of course I said ‘Yes.’”

Roz shows me the bear-shaped cookie jar that she named Bob in memory of her dear departed brother who almost single-handedly constructed the store. “I saw the bear on a stamp and copied it for my logo,” she explains. With two full-time and two part-time bakers whom she trained, Roz maintains her long hours with a cheerful disposition. “This is such a hard business,” she reiterates. “Many Society Hill residents avoid the South Street area. We always need more customers. I just want the entire Delaware Valley to know I’m here.”

Visit her Facebook page, homemadegoodiesbyroz. Better yet, visit her shop!
