THE RESIDENT NEWSLETTER

Box 3, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19105

Skeleton of twenty-five story Independence Square Two is now nearing completion. Neighbors and passerby hope its closing in will stop the rain of debris.

More on the Tun Tavern Site

The ordinance Councilman Leland Beloff put through City Council leasing the property at the corner of Spruce and Mattis Streets for fifty years at $1 a year for a new chapel for the Chapel of the Four Chaplains may be invalid. SHCA and the residents of Penn's Landing Square have been joined by the American Civil Liberties Union in questioning the ordinance on the ground that it violates the principle of the separation of church and state spelled out in the U.S. Constitution. More later.

MARK YOUR CALENDARS!

The next general meeting of the Society Hill Civic Association will be held Wednesday, December 18th at 8 p.m., Old Pine Community Center, 4th and Lombard. SHCA representatives will report on their meetings with City Managing Director James White's task force concerned with neighborhoods affected by I-95 traffic and the construction of future ramps. There will be an update on the action filed by SHCA to enforce the agreement with carriage companies to remove horse manure. Refreshments will be served at this meeting.

Independence Place Two Ready for a Skin

This twenty-five story condominium tower between 5th and 6th Streets is almost ready to be closed in which will be a great relief to residents of the neighborhood who have been inundated with trash from the workmen's snack food and lunches. Coffee cups, sugar and cream containers, tasty cake wrappers, etc. can be found in the streets, on the sidewalks, in courtyards and gardens in an ever-widening radius as the building gets higher. The Society Hill Club has resorted to cleaning the pool twice daily and it is not an uncommon experience to swim into floating coffee cream containers and other debris while doing one's laps.

The parking garage at Washington Square was originally designed to provide parking for both of the condominium towers and the townhouses at St. James Court and Manning Walk. At this point the garage handles the parking, plus moving trucks and all the garbage trucks that enter the driveway to collect garbage from the first tower, the retail stores and the Society Hill Club. The Washington Sq. garage was designed without the overhead to accommodate trucks such as garbage trucks, so that all dumpsters must be pulled out of the garage for disposal. Manning Walk and Spruce Street residents have been subject to this noise for some time now and are apprehensive about the volume of garbage generated by residents of the second tower that will have to be hauled away.

Super Survey Under Way

The inventory of Society Hill for listing as a Philadelphia Historical District under the new Preservation Ordinance is moving into high gear. Joyce Cole, a director of SHCA and also of the survey, has organized the procedural details. Judy Alden, co-director, is compiling information for the statement of historic significance required in the designation form. Ed Dreby is coordinating street layouts and address lists with his locale photographs. Several graduate students from the American Studies and Preservation departments at both Temple and the University of Pennsylvania have been researching and writing up information about each house, starting at Front Street and creeping west. Martha Levy and her eighth graders at St. Peter's School are

Care and Treatment of Lunatics,

One of the first two patients admitted to the Pennsylvania Hospital on February 11, 1752 was listed a "lunatic". The principal motive which inspired the founders of the institution, as well as the main argument for erecting a hospital, was "the care and treatment of Lunatics", in order that "they may be restored to reason and become useful members of the community." With the construction of the first section of the building on 8th Street, the insane were kept on the lower level partially below ground in specially constructed cells. There are records that mention of hand cuffs, "madd shirts of Ticken", Legg irons and chains, and "locks and chains for the cells." Confinement was the primary treatment before the arrival of Benjamin Rush in 1783, and half of the Pennsylvania Hospital buildings and two thirds of the grounds at 8th and Pine were used for the treatment of the insane.

Visitors come curiously, or especially to mock and jeer at the strange creatures. They created so much disturbance in the city, that there was a special plaque prepared and hung on the door of the hospital. It read, "persons who come out of curiosity to visit the home should pay a sum of money, a groat at least, for admission."

Various new treatments were employed

when Dr. Rush joined the staff. There was bloodletting, a "gyrator", or revolving machine, which sent blood to the head and accelerated the heart beat, and there was his "tranquilizing chair", in which the opposite effect was produced. There were purges, emetics, cold baths and showers prescribed. Because of the relatively innovative treatment, there was overcrowding, and another site of 100 acres on Haverford Road was acquired and another facility constructed.

Needless to say, there has been much change in the understanding and treatment of the mentally ill. Today, the Hall-Mercer Community Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center of Pennsylvania operates with a staff of 139 including psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, nurses, other mental health professionals and support staff.

There are adult ambulatory services that provide care to over 2300 individuals annually. The services include 24 hour emergency help, outpatient therapy, partial hospitalization, social clinic programs, social rehabilitation, outreach to the homeless, geriatric outreach and case management which is available to all persons receiving out-patient mental health services at Hall-Mercer Center.

The short-term 26 bed inpatient unit is located on the eighth floor of the Core Building of Pennsylvania Hospital. The program combines team treatment, psychiatric supervision and milieu therapy. There is a maximum stay on the unit of 60 days.

Child and Family Mental Health Services is the component of the Center which provides outpatient psychiatric programs for children and their families. Family therapy as well as individual, group and play therapy services for children are available, and there are two specialized day programs offered.

A comprehensive array of services to mentally retarded children and adults are provided. There are outpatient services, special in-home services, a Children's Home Intervention Program, and a Learning Center — a day program for mentally retarded adults. It offers individualized training of self-care, home and community living, social interaction and pre-vocational skills with the goal of improving the patient's ability to function independently.

There is a Child and Parent Center offering stimulating play experiences for infants and toddlers and consultation to parents on parenting and child development issues. Parent child play groups and specialized parent discussion groups are

Streetsweepers — the straight scoop

Judging from the appearance of our streets and sidewalks some of the time — too much of the time in the estimation of many residents — it is difficult to believe that major streets, namely, Walnut, Locust, Spruce, Pine and Lombard are scheduled to be cleaned on a daily basis and blockmen are scheduled for every day except Mondays and Tuesdays in the Society Hill area, according to Area Superintendent Hammond.

Mr. Hammond and District Supervisor Blackson regularly inspect the Center City area and are not satisfied with its condition, you will be happy to know. One of the problems is that sanitation workers who are ill or on vacation have no substitutes for the period they are out. Area Superintendent Hammond said that the street cleaners receive a base pay of $14,300 and senior workers receive more, with a maximum pay under $20,000. There is a foreman in the hierarchy between the street cleaners and Supervisor Blackson.

If you have a complaint about the condition of your street, Area Superintendent Hammond suggests that you contact him by calling: 686-1776, extension 84401 and he will investigate the situation.

Winter Garden Tips

If you have evergreens or annuals in clay garden containers, you should empty these containers before they freeze, thaw and crack. If your evergreens are in plastic, wood or cement containers with an expansion joint, it is extremely important to keep the containers damp to prevent the evergreens from dying of dehydration. The evergreens should be watered during the winter each time there is a thaw. If these contained shrubs face the wind, a simple wind baffle can be constructed using three tomato stakes and burlap. The middle stake should face the direction of the prevailing wind. If your garden faces south, your plants and shrubs are particularly vulnerable to the winter sun which heats them up during the day with the possibility of the temperature dropping 20-25 degrees during the night causing the bark to crack.

A mulch of three-to-four inches of shredded hardwood bark is recommended for containers and bed plantings. Wilt-proof spray can be applied to shrubs to protect them from dehydration over the winter.

If you have roses in your garden, it is important to prune to three feet to prevent wind whip and after the first hard freeze they should be mulched with three to five inches of organic material.

City gardeners who own young fruit trees should keep mulch away from the trunk to prevent mice from nesting and feeding on the bark. A coiled plastic wrap available at garden centers is recommended for wrapping these trees from the ground up to the first limb. The wrap serves as protection from the mice and from the wind.

A last word of caution: Be careful not to dump wet, heavy snow on spreading evergreens and be careful that salt does not get into the soil as it dehydrates plant roots. If some salt accidentally gets into the soil, its effect can be neutralized, to some degree, by adding gypsum to the soil.

The above garden tips have been made available by Steve Frowine, staff horticulturist, Burpee Seed Company.

TURN PHILADELPHIA'S TRASH INTO TREASURE

Philadelphia is getting serious about its trash problem. After the courts barred Philadelphia trucks from the Kinsley Dumpsite in Deptford Township New Jersey, the city was faced with the possibility that trash might have to be trucked as far away as Tennessee — at astronomical costs. The proposed "trash to steam" plant idea was defeated by residents who opposed having such a plant in their backyards. Recycling, separating out such reuseable materials as aluminum, glass and paper, was an idea whose time had come. It is estimated that recycling could reduce waste in the city by 600 tons a day. October was declared "Recycling Month" and culminated in the dedication of the first of a projected thirty "Buy Back" neighborhood recycling centers.

Society Hill doesn't have a recycling program yet, but two of our neighbors do. In Queen Village on the second and fourth Saturday of each month from 10 to 2, you can drop off your collection at the parking lot of Meredith Elementary School in the 400 block of Monroe Street. In Olde City, the drop-off spot is at the northwest corner of Arch and Third Streets, with collection from 10 to 2 on the first Saturday of each month, beginning Dec. 7th. Proceeds from sales will benefit neighborhood cleanup in Queen Village and pay for street trees in Olde City. Both organizations are working toward establishing a permanent station where recyclables can be dropped off 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

In the meantime, by using both collection stations, you need not store the stuff for longer than two weeks. Preparing materials for the drop-off isn't difficult. Newspapers should be bundled with string or firmly stuffed into paper (not plastic) grocery bags; glass bottles should be rinsed out and separated by color (you can do that when you get to the collection place) and aluminum cans should be partially crushed.

So, this Wednesday instead of putting your valuable trash out on the curb for the city truck, hold onto it until a recycling Saturday and take it a few blocks north or south. You'll feel good about saving a tree, a beach, gallons of water, lots of energy and even some tax money.

Think about it:

Every ton of paper, glass, and aluminum we put into the trash costs our City $100 to get rid of.

Now you can
RECYCLE . . .

. . . your newspapers, glass jars & bottles, and aluminum cans.

Bring them to the Meredith School parking lot, 400 block of Monroe St.

Second and fourth Saturdays of every month, 10 am to 2 pm.

See you there.

To the Editor:

Mail delivery to our household has been a recurring problem for some time. At least once a week we receive our neighbors' mail, and they ours. Bills have gone astray, resulting in late charges and credit difficulties. Recently an important business package was returned to the sender because we supposedly had not responded to the three notices of attempted delivery (one of them on a Sunday!) — none of which we received.

In a gesture of frustration, we called the Postal Service to complain. After being passed from one person to the next for a while, we had the good fortune at last to speak with a supervisor, Mrs. Cirwithian, at 592-9614. Although her troubles sounded worse than ours, she kindly offered to look into the matter, and invited us to call her back if the problems continued. We thought your readers in a similar situation might be interested in having her name and number.

Ellen Miller

Dear Editor:

Some suggestions to improve our neighborhood.

Since it is increasingly obvious that the city is unable or unwilling to maintain our walkways and pocket parks, is there more we residents can do to keep them at least clean?

A few of us on the three hundred block of Delancey Street for several years have pruned, planted and kept up St. Peter's Way between Delancey and Pine. This involves daily picking up of cans, bottles, trash, etc., often picking our way around the drunks sleeping on the benches. Unfortunately these drunks not only use the parks as dormitories but also as lavatories — which has caused some funny confrontations!

The young mothers who bring their children to play in Three Bears Park could organize themselves to keep it clean. The residents of Lawrence Court and Street have made a beginning at improving the walkway by the Super Fresh market.

To keep our neighborhood attractive needs constant daily vigilance not just an occasional cleanup.

On Guard

One of your neighbors and his wife were returning from dinner at a South Street restaurant about 11 p.m. on a Monday night in late October. As they turned off Delancey Street to American Street on their way to Spruce, the male member of a couple walking east on Delancey called to them. The husband turned to respond and had a gun pointed at his face. He was instructed to turn over his wallet which he did and the robbers left.

The couple who were robbed knocked on the nearest door and the police were called immediately. About five police cars arrived within five minutes and were given the details and a good description of the couple. The police who were described as "marvelous" and "very cooperative" spread out and found the female accomplice with the gun used in the holdup on the I-95 cover at Front Street. She led them to her male companion. According to the couple who were robbed, both criminals were known to the police.

A preliminary hearing was held and will be continued after this issue is put to bed. In the meantime, lighting has been improved on American Street and an overgrown tree obscuring a streetlight has been trimmed.

DARTS AND LAURELS

Dart—to the person who threw the inflammable substance into the incinerator at Society Hill Towers, causing a fire necessitating the evacuation of all the residents in the South Tower the first chilly Sunday of the season.

Laurel—to the prompt response of The Philadelphia Fire Department, which quickly controlled the blaze enabling everyone to return home and cozy-up again.

Dart—to the carriage drivers who "forget" to attach the containment devices agreed upon in the settlement order to keep our streets clean and sanitary or who attached devices in a manner so that only unusually talented horses can utilize them.

Laurel—to the determined and dedicated preservationists who wouldn't give up and who were successful in "averting the Litz Blitz". Construction on The Lit Brothers Department Store complex begins very soon.

Laurel—and welcome to Ralph Pitman Jr., the new rector of St. Peter's Church who has returned to Philadelphia from St. Steven's Church in Richmond, VA.

Laurel—to the alert and brawny Friends' Central senior who pulled six members of the University of Pennsylvania sailing club to safety when their boat capsized at Penn's Landing a very windy and rainy Monday in November.

Laurel—to "Bogie of Front Street" whose sharp and intimidating bark frightened off two "would-be intruders" from a neighbor's home.

Dart—to all cigarette smokers who don't care that smoking is dangerous to their health or that much of the trash left along our neighborhood streets is discarded cigarette packages, match covers, and butts that border the red bricks so unattractively.

Laurel—to Tim Spencer of the Graffiti Network, Leonard Rovner, principal of McCall School, Barton Burke, president of the McCall Home and School Association, SHCA members, teachers, parents and other community members who covered all the graffiti on the school in about three hours on Saturday, September 28th.

Dart—to State Representative Babette Joseph for refusing to support a pending bill to provide trash pickup for condominiums on the same basis as single family dwellings.

Laurel—to Lee Beloff for sponsoring a horse manure containment bill in City Council.

busy identifying architectural features. This dedicated cadre hopes to see the massive and important cataloging project completed by the end of the year, and indeed they may, with your help. If you like architectural detective work, Joyce would love to hear from you (925-7103) and help with an assignment. She also realizes that you probably know more about your own houses, and block, than anyone else. A brief statement giving the address, dates of constructing, dates of renovation, if any and names of all architects involved would be extremely helpful.

SHCA and the directors are doing their best to keep costs down on this huge undertaking, but expenses in excess of budget are inevitable. Therefore, they invite you to be a Sponsor. A tax-deductible contribution of $100 or more to "SHCA-Certification Fund" will ensure that your name will be listed in the Sponsors section of the report and that you will receive a special token of appreciation. Just in time for holiday gift-giving, too!
